“I advise clients on all legal issues involving financial distress, whether their own or their counterparties'.”

Jim has handled significant litigation in courts and arbitration panels across the country, with an emphasis on cases in U.S. district and bankruptcy courts, ranging from complex commercial disputes to fraudulent transfer actions. In bankruptcy courts, Jim has represented creditors, debtors, and financial advisors in all aspects of adversary and contested proceedings, including Chapter 11 plan confirmation and Section 363 sales.

Outside of court, Jim advises and represents borrowers, lenders, and other creditors in workouts, restructurings, and liquidations. He is frequently consulted on transactional risks such as potential fraudulent or preferential transfers, lender liability, and bankruptcy exposure. His workout experience includes various types and structures of both debt and equity, including restructuring trust preferred securities (TruPS) and corporate liquidations.
